Enameled Coinage

The "lost art" process of enameling coins originated in Birmingham, England where a relatively few artisans produced these pieces in the 1880's through the early 1900's with none being made after 1920.

Each piece usually had several different colors of enamel applied to a coin surface (nearly always the reverse of the coin) which was first prepared by engraving. The engraving was done so that the enamel would adhere to the coin surface and assume a flat, even relief. The process gave each coin an original and unique quality with no two ever being exactly alike.

Enamel is very hard and very brittle and its glass-like qualities make it vulnerable to chipping. The amount or lack of chipping is one of the criteria for grading these pieces.

Most enameling was done on the coins of Great Britain, with the 1887 Jubilee series being one of the more popular. Beautiful examples of this art are to be found on other world coins but to a much lesser degree.

The following three sections feature an offering of original plaster models, galvanos and finished works by the Frasers, John R. Sinnock and Karl Goetz. Some of these have appeared in our previous sales while a number are new additions. (Refer to Sale 36 - Oct. 1980, Sale 41 - Sept. 1981 and Sale 42 - Oct. 1981). We are fortunate to have these once again consigned.

Please note that our estimates are somewhat conservative. This is an opportune time to acquire these as, once sold, they are not likely to be available again for a decade or more.

This sale represents a departure from our standard bill of fare. No coins are permitted to be offered at this convention or in any of the five auctions in conjunction with this exposition. If you have collector friends or clients who may be interested in the material offered in this sale I would appreciate your sharing this catalog with them.

The numismatic and associated collectible activities from August 12th through the 22nd in Boston is incredible. The activity will start with the Bay State Show, Auction '82, and the Summer National Collectibles Exposition. This exposition will include exnumia auctions by Paul Cunningham, Rich Hartzog, Johnson and Jensen, and Kurt Kruger, in addition to our own sale. The PNG Day for the ANA is Monday August 16th followed by the six day ANA Convention. In addition a handful of other auction companies will be conducting U.S. and foreign coin sales during the week. My firm will be the only one offering original plasters, pocket watches and numismatic literature. Along this line we received some late consignments of very desirable pocket watches and numismatic literature which may appear in our September sale. Pocket watches will be a continuing venture with us depending on bidder demand and interest. Please feel free to express your interest in future offerings such as this. We may have an insert in this catalog listing additional pocket watch lots from lot 439 on.

Of interest to our bidders, as noted in the terms of sale, we can now provide insurance in transit overseas. Additionally as a convenience we can accept payment by MasterCard or VISA. As we work on a small commission and do not own this material outright a small handling charge is required for this convenience.

Our upcoming fall sales will include collections of ancients, early Swedish crowns, U.S., miscellaneous world coins, world coin errors and many Swiss and German talers. We intend to de-emphasize medals. Consignments still are being accepted by mail or by me in person at the Collectibles and ANA Conventions.
